

The NYC High School Application Process I: Examining Educational Access and Equity

November 1, 2016

Fordham Law School
150 West 62nd Street

Space is limited.
Registration - $30.

Register at law.fordham.edu/educationequity

Additional Co-Sponsors:

Fordham Law School Urban Law Journal

Fordham University Graduate School of Education –
The Center for Educational Partnerships.

80,000 eighth graders a year participate in New York City's high school application "match" process. Adopted in 2003, the City's "match" process seeks to maximize student choice and access to schools. In scope and complexity, New York City's system is unique in the country.

This conference will focus exclusively on the City's 700-program high school admissions procedure, which presents an important opportunity to examine:

- issues of educational equity and diversity;
- the challenges faced by students, families, service providers, and educators in navigating the process; and
- the opportunities for systemic reforms, practice improvements, and best practices